You may have a classical kid if...

Kids who spend their days surrounded by classical music, art, literature, and more tend to sound different... in the best way possible! Below are some fun parent submissions that shed a little light on the classical difference. Enjoy!

"What's that?"

We are SO grateful for our local pastors!

Pastor Ryan Wilson

Thank you to our January chapel speakers, both from the Hayward Wesleyan Church! Pastor Ryan Wilson gave a message about the Shield of Faith at our First Monday Chapel. And at our Thursday Chapel, Pastor Ben Kidder spoke to us about seeking God with our whole heart. Both pastors were so engaging! Our students, staff, and families were thrilled to have them!

Back-to-Basics

In the grammar stage, classical Christian education gives young students a joyful and age-appropriate foundation for learning. Without iPads or Chromebooks, children spend their days reading good books, practicing handwriting, reciting poems and facts, and learning to love words and stories. This screen-free environment supports healthy attention, imagination, and fine motor development while helping students build strong habits of focus. Learning is active and communal: children play games together, sing, move, and learn through repetition and rhythm, all while forming friendships and social skills.
